

How to Get Credit Card Numbers the Easy Way!

Hello. I would just like everyone to know that I, LuvoxPhreak, created this file and you may publish it anywhere you want, but you gotta keep my name on it. Ok? Ok. Well, on to the good stuff. Laptops. We all want them, right? Who wouldn't want a nice P2 366Mhz laptop? But until now you couldn't card one without getting caught. Why? Because the good laptops cost about $7000 and barely ANYONE has that much credit on their cards. And even if you do get someone with that much credit, the Credit Card Company will call the owner and tell them something is going on, and that almost ALWAYS happens. If you try to card a laptop like that, I promise you, when you go to pick it up, you will have a nice greeting from some pigs. My method goes around all that. I exploit a very easy tactic which was un-thought-of until now. But I'll get to that later.

First, We need a card, right? I have a method for all the lazy people out there like me. I like to think of my method as "The Robin Hood Method." Basically: Steal from the rich, give to the poor. Am I poor? Hell no... That's why I don't card things for myself. I card things for everyone else. Anyways, back on the subject, AOL hosts half of the internet population and many (but not all) people on AOL are idiots. Spam the dumbasses. First, go to the AOL member directory. Search WITHIN your hometown for people with high-paying jobs (e.g. CEO, President, etc). Copy all the names down and add it to a list. Now we prepare a perfect spam letter.

I usually open a pagoo box (www.pagoo.com) with a pin number like "AOLBILLING." If you are knowledgeable in HTML, use it. Make the fonts and colors different on the letter so it looks professional. Not skilled in HTML? It's ok. I've solved that problem. Here is how: Open AOL 4.0. Click on "Write an E-mail." Write an e-mail in all the different colors and fonts you want that makes the letter look professional. Then save it as a text file and close it. Open the text file under Notepad and you should see all the HTML stuff. Use that.

Here is an example of a spam letter I use:

```
<HTML></P><P ALIGN=CENTER><FONT COLOR="#ff0000" SIZE=5
PTSIZE=14><B>Attention America Online Member:<BR>
</P><P ALIGN=LEFT></FONT><FONT COLOR="#000000" SIZE=3 PTSIZE=9>AOL
User Number: [3497-354-3224]<BR>
<BR>
Dear America Online Community Member,<BR> </FONT><FONT SIZE=3 PTSIZE=10></B>We regret to inform you that we have encountered <BR> problems verifying your billing information. This could <BR> be due to problems with your credit card or lost/corrupted<BR> information on our server. <BR>
```

To help us correct the problem, you may push "Reply" and respond with:

- * Your Credit Card number

- * Your Credit Card Expiration Date

- * Your Credit Card Issuer (E.g. VISA, MasterCard, etc)

- * The name that appears on the Credit Card.

- * Your last name

- * Your first name

- * Your address

- * Your phone number

Or you may leave us a message or the requested information at 1-800-724-6644, Extension "AOLBILLING" (Or "2652455464" on the keypad) and give us your full billing information over the phone or leave us a message.

Important:

If you do not respond within 30 days, we will have to terminate your account.

America Online takes full responsibility for the confidentiality of your reply.

 After we have verified the information you provided, we will credit you account with $3.95. Thank you for your cooperation regarding this matter. Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any questions or comments.

Sincerely,
Don Colcolough
Senior Manager, Billing
America Online, Inc.
</HTML>

On AOL, All the stuff shows up in color and you can't see all that junk. Now, What I do to send the spam letter is use the anonymizer (www.anonymizer.com) and open a hotmail account. Then anonymize yourself and send the letter to the people on your list through hotmail. You probably are thinking that people aren't dumb enough to fall for a hotmail address, but TRUST me, they are. I get over 30 CC#'s a night from that alone. If they just send you back their phone number, call them and pretend to be from AOL. It always works on the idiots. Anyways, if done right, you should have a bunch of cards uncluding Platinum cards.

There are other ways to get Credit Card Number: Dumpster Diving and Steal Mailing, to name a couple. But I am too lazy to Dumpster Dive and most mails don't have the credit card expiration date on them. Now: To get the laptop, you need a few things:

Get 100 bucks in cash. Go to 7-11 and register a Tracphone (Give them the name and address of the card holder). You will get 40 free minutes on the Tracphone and you don't need to give them ANY type of Credit Card information. Now you have a number that the laptop company can call you at to verify your order. After you are done carding the laptop, throw away the phone. It would be stupid to keep it around. Now to the good stuff: GETTING the laptop.

There is the one good way to get the laptop: Lease, Lease to buy, or A paying plan. They all mean the same thing. Basically, The card owner will get a $40-100 charge on his credit card for about 48 months. This won't tip off the Credit Card company and the pigs won't get involved. Hell... The owner of the card might not even notice charges than small on his card.

Now here is what you do:

When you are entering the site, sometimes the computer company asks you "What kind of user are you?" ALWAYS put "Small Business." This works the best at www.dell.com. If the computer company thinks your a business, they won't ask for a social security number. Go pick out the very BEST laptop and then click "Customize it." At the computer sites, they give you the choice to add stuff to your order like a portable printer, digital camera, etc. Well... give your laptop the best: DVD 4x drive, 386 MB of RAM, 8 GB hard Drive, etc. Then add on stuff like Digital camera, scanner, etc. By customizing it, they have to build you a WHOLE new laptop and you also will get the VERY best!

There are different sites and different ways to handle check-out. If check-out gives you the option of "Who will take responsibility for this laptop?" and it gives you the choice of saying "I will" or "Company name will:"

ALWAYS do Company name. If you want to be evil, put "Pacific Bell" as the company name. This way they don't ask for social security numbers. If you do have the card owner's social security number, then go for the mother of all laptops: GATEWAY (www.gateway.com). Gateway asks too many questions for my comfort, but they have the VERY best laptops around. I guess you could always put a fake SS# in and have the laptop overnighted, but they might find out and you could go to pick up your laptop and meet some pigs when you get there. So I wouldn't risk it. Always have the laptop sent to the owner's house and overnight it. It will get there while he is at work, so pick it up from his doorstep.

And if the Computer Company asks for a phone number, give them the Tracphone number. Or if you have time on your hands and you don't have $100 bucks for a Tracphone, have the laptop overnighted and sit by a payphone with a ringer during the whole day and answer it when they call. But most of us don't want to sit by a payphone day and night. Sometimes the owner will get some papers to sign about the lease the next month and discover what's going on, so never register the laptop thinking that it might not be noticed as "stolen." But that's common sense, right?

If anyone has any questions, e-mail me at LuvoxPheak@yahoo.com

Bye

Useful links:

www.dell.com (low-security, easy to get a laptop)

www.handtech.com (low-security, but might need SS#)

www.gateway.com (high security, but oh-so-worth-it)

This file for educational purposes only. We take no responsibility for what you may do with this information.

This file brought to you by: WRAITH Tech Industries--Making The Future Happen Today

Ù j! ¶$D"w_!