Computer Setup

Before you start this, it is assumed that you already have broadband internet and some bitcoin to buy necessary tools. Use dedicated computer for carding purpose..never use it for your personal things.

1.) Install Xubuntu 12.04.04
http://cdimage.ubuntu.com/xubuntu/releases/12.04.4/release/xubuntu-12.04.4-alternate-i386.iso

2.) Download that .iso file in win 7, after finished.. right click and there is option for burn image.so burn it into a blank cd or dvd

3.) Boot up the disc means when you start your computer everytime it will display the BIOS screen first. So usually press F11 or F10 key on your keyboard repeatedly to get into boot up option.Choose the dvd-rom

4.) So boot up the the disc and install Xubuntu on your computer, just follow the on-screen instruction. After installed.. update the necessary software. It will pop up and just follow the instruction

5.) Click the start button at the upper left.. and click Ubuntu Software Center. In the search box,type "Virtual Box". It will display the result.. then click install button on the right..wait until finish installation.

6.) Click start button again..look for the installed virtual box. You should see virtual box.. so click the "New" button..and it will ask what type of windows..so choose appropriate windows. In this tutorial we will use win 7, so select it. It is recommended use 32 bit only because your Xubuntu is also 32 bit. Unless you choose 64bit Xubuntu, then using 64 bit win 7 is not a problem.

7.) Same as step 4. You get a win 7 disc..boot up from it and install the windows on virtual machine. After you installed win 7. It is recommended to disable the windows update and remote access. Click start.. right click computer. Go to Properties, Advanced System Settings - Remote tab. Start button again right click computer Properties Windows Update – disable automatic update

8.) Inside the win 7 virtual machine, install the following software..

Firefox browser - http://www.mozilla.org/en-US/firefox/all/

After installed firefox, install this add-on : https://addons.mozilla.org/en-US/firefox/addon/user-agent-switcher/

Mac changer - http://www.technitium.com/tmac/

CCleaner - https://www.piriform.com/ccleaner/download/standard

Hardisk serial changer - http://www.xboxharddrive.com/freeware.html

Bleachbit - http://bleachbit.sourceforge.net/download/file?file=BleachBit-1.0-setup.exe

Tor browser bundle – torproject.org

VIP72.org and vpn (means on xubuntu u already connected to vpn..and inside win7 vm..you also can connect to another vpn..means double vpn)

Filemind QuickFix, a program use to clear metatag file on picture/file. THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT when you are on deepweb, bcoz sometimes you need to upload picture or upload files to share with other ppl.. so u need to wipe the file trace before uploading.

Otherwise LE (law enforcement) can check the meta file and identify your location.Download here : https://anonfiles.com/file/de9377363820afb494cbdee9a98b8eed

9.) Setting DNS on Win 7 (Virtual machine)VM

Click Control Panel-- >

Network and Internet --- >

Network and Sharing Center --- >

Change adapter setting --- >

if you are connected with Lan Cable.. right click Local Area Connection Properties -- >

Internet Protocol TCP/IP Version 4 --- >

Click Obtain IP address Automatically, and DNS use the following DNS Server addresses

   Preferred DNS : 8.8.8.8
   Alternate DNS : 8.8.4.4

10.) You also need to setting DNS on Xubuntu

-   disconnect everything.. lan/wifi/internet/vpn,etc

-   move the mouse to upper right.. look for up and down arrow (download and upload). click on it.. you should see list of wifi name etc.. go to bottom and click "Edit connections.."

-   under "wired" tab, choose the wired connection 1.. and click "Edit" button next to it.

-   look for IPv4 settings and click it. you should see "Method", click it. and choose "Automatic(DHCP) addresses only"

-   the DNS servers column should be blank and white.. you can input the ip address. input the google dns. which is 8.8.8.8

-   click save. you are done.

- repeat the same steps under "wireless"

*please note, if your computer connects to multiple wifi..you need to input the dns manually for each wifi name.

How to change computer name of Xubuntu

- open terminal

- type this : gksudo gedit /etc/hosts

- it will ask for password.. enter it.. and you will see notepad opened.. look for 2nd line.. 127.0.0.1 <name> so replace <name> with the name you want. then save the notepad

  *ignored the *untitled document1, dont need to save anything

- type again : gksudo gedit /etc/hostname

- it will ask for password.. enter it.. and you will see notepad opened.. put in any name you want(should be the same name as previous). and save the notepad

- *ignored the *untitled document1, dont need to save anything

- restart your computer

- you should see when trying to login, the name has changed.

How to change Xubuntu mac address

- open terminal, connect to internet & type the following :

     $ sudo apt-get install macchanger

*wait until installation finish .. if cannot install...try sudo apt-get update && sudo apt-get upgrade

-   type this in terminal
       $ ifconfig

look for wlan0, you should see something like this 00:11:22:33:44:55 (this is the mac address)

wlan0 = means ur wifi adapter

eth0 = your network adapter disconnect your wifi/ethernet first then type the following :

  $ sudo ifconfig wlan0 down

for ethernet

$ sudo ifconfig eth0 down

(still the same..except replace wlan0 with eth0, u should know what to do with next steps, if you change mac more than few times..sometimes the eth0 will become eth1,2,3, etc..so the command need to change as well. You have to go to "edit connections"... move the mouse to upper right.. look for up and down arrow (download and upload). click on it.. you should see list of wifi name etc.. go to bottom and click "Edit connections.." then you might see "wired connections 2, 3,4..so delete the unused)

change your mac address

type the following :

  $ sudo macchanger -r wlan0

if it still says MAC is still the same.. try this

  $ sudo macchanger -A wlan0

        it should says mac address has changed

  -   start the wlan0 back up

        $ sudo ifconfig wlan0 up

  -   check if mac address has changed or not $ ifconfig

- Xubuntu now can connect internet and VPN, the run virtualbox (PLS NOTE – WHEN U RESTARTED THE COMP, MAC ADDRESS WILL CHANGE BACK TO DEFAULT, AND ALSO WHEN YOU DISCONNECTTED AND RECONNECT THE WIFI..MAC ADDRESS ALSO CHANGED BACK TO DEFAULT.. SO check properly before connect to wifi)

Message to Law Enforcement – Part 1

If we go back in history to when society was based around the hunter and gatherer process of life, there was no existent monetary system. People from villages would venture into the wilderness and scavenge for food by hunting animals just to survive. If we go forward in time to keep this simplistic, those hunters eventually became experts in their profession because of their experience which means they brought back the most food and resources for their village. In turn, these advanced hunters and gatherers were admired by members of the village, subsequently giving them a "leader" or alpha male role in society.

These upper echelon hunters would have been questioned by other aspiring male hunters, enquiring about their method, knowledge and training schemes. Let's go forward in time again – the previously master hunters now had no need to hunt for themselves. Instead, they became teachers or trainers and taught the aforementioned aspiring hunters how to hunt efficiently. Teaching ultimately, and inevitably, became a career for the master hunters. Advancing in time yet again, the master hunters who became teachers researched different aspects of other fields and walks of life – developing formal communication through language, the alphabet, and numbers and so on.

Society found a new way of transferring knowledge through what we consider rudimentary skills of life – reading and writing. Knowledge would have been passed through the work of ancestors who would have documented research, knowledge and findings in books or stone carving – earning them a position as "teacher" or "scholar". An advancement in knowledge and science meant that because of thecomplexity of this information – things needed to be managed which lead to members of society being elected to form a government, where positions like the King's advisor were fulfilled. This orchestralcontrol meant that any issues or aspects needing management in the society could be taken care of.There's simply no need to go in depth about monetary systems because everyone knows how they works. But something worth understanding is that a ruler in society will always want to be in control of everything and anything. The leader will do whatever they can because their dream is to stabilize and advance society. But understandably, there is a need for a monetary system. In ancient economy, gold was a standard measurement of money because it was (and still is) perceived to have value and only be available in limited quantities. Over time, the economy growth was stagnant because gold wasn't plenteous. This meant "bankers" began to give loans to people through checks which were insured by gold deposits that they had guarded and secured. Bankers realised they could make a lot of money through this and continued providing loans which then provokes a reaction from the government – who ordered that gold is no longer the ruling currency, and instead, paper money became the ruling money.(try google brenton woods agreement, which removes the gold standard)This paper money was backed by another paper money. This is known as fractional reserve banking because fiat monetary systems drove economy growth beyond unforeseeable levels at the expensive of honest and hardworking slaves.

The government and rulers still continue this predatory practice today.
To keep this money in circulation and maintain its value, something had to be done. Then came debt and interest rate charges; all money is debt, this is fact. Do your own research. Every time banks lend out money they only create principal money and the interest rate money doesn't exist. The amount of debt is always more than the available money supply in the economy. Because of this, people need to compete with one another in order to pay back their debt. In order for someone to pay back their loan, someone else is going into debt and bankruptcy. It's nothing but a game of musical chairs where one player loses. Even if you got the most brilliant business idea, other people will take advantages of it or bring you down because that's what the system create. You cant do it without hurting someone. It's also notable that the government and bankers will never allow people to finish paying their debt because the economy would stop. Therefore, as society today, we are in an infinite growth paradigm economy. All these systems used for economic growth engines require slaves and ignorant people to run them.

The only way to force idiotic working class people is to trap them through debt in the form of loans you'll commonly see on the market today. Ask yourself honestly, how do you think people will react when they're under constant stress because of the pressure to pay debt? The working class get home from work and vent their depression/torture and unhappiness on their children because their job sucks but they have to work. When these children grow up, what are they likely to become? Drug dealers, criminals, and in relevance – carders. Even if someone or police/LawEnforcement had the ability to kill every criminal on Earth, crime will never disappear. It's not the criminal themselves but the system that produces criminal behaviour.

Upper class people are also under stress from bank loans, shareholder pressure and threat from competition in business. Eventually this leads these people to criminal ventures (carding is a prime example) to continue their business to provide a living. You may argue that genuine business(wo)men, don't need to resort to crime but going back to the musical chair example, even if everyone is an upper class businessman, bankruptcy is still inevitable. The upper class will always want to control the economy via interest rate and tax. They can create an economic crisis. Stock companies fall and you'll always see upper class companies taking over smaller companies (corporate merger, takeover).

We're all in this game created by upper class people, pro-capitalist advocates/economists, even before we are born.. Society is like this because the rulers of society print the money, pay people so they work for something and then in return they sell back their product and services to the king. This makes sense to people until they realize that the king pays them using money that is backed by another paper money. This is pretty similar to counterfeiting and means you've been scammed. Undoubtedly, the rulers of society are smart. They want to protect their status so they spend massive amounts of money hiring law enforcement. The secret service, the FBI, police departments etc. So why would the law enforcement protect society's rulers? Because they're being paid by them? Yes, partly... But what the law enforcement don't realise is that the money they're being paid is as I said previously just money backed by another paper money. So when the law enforcement is supporting and defending this money, they're actually just supporting a system which is a crime against humanity in itself. How can law enforcement consider themselves ethical when their salary is backed by the biggest crooks ever to walk the Earth? Our greatest crime problems are the direct results of our economic system. The monetary-based system(from kabbalists banksters) on which the world operates is a broken and corrupt scheme that promotes obsolescence for the sake of profit. Sustainability and resourcefulness only hinder that idea in a monetary based economy.

Message to Law Enforcement – Part 2

The argument I often hear is why don't you get a job like everybody else? It has to be reminded that this type of crime usually we are trying to attack the bigger institution like bank. I know credit card fraud victim usually is the one to take loss, but its not the point.. the picture here is they will report to authority and bank. Later they will get back their money

Even in legit jobs, what we are doing is not necessary right. Goods such as foods are sometimes destroyed to keep prices up; when things are scarce prices increase.

race to buy up world's water supply : (clearnet warning) http://www.newsweek.com/race-buy-worlds-water-73893

In his famous novel The Grapes of Wrath (Chapter 25), John Steinbeck described how food was destroyed during the Great Depression :

"Carloads of oranges dumped on the ground. The people come from miles to take the fruit, but this could not be. How would they buy oranges if they could drive out and pick them up? And men with hoses squirt kerosene on the oranges... A million people hungry, needing the fruit – and kerosene sprayed over the golden mountains. And the smell of rot fills the country.

Burn coffee for fuel in the ships... Dump potatoes in the rivers and place guards along the banks to keep the hungry people from fishing them out [with nets]. Slaughter the pigs and bury them...

And children dying of pellagra must die because a profit cannot be taken from an orange. And coroners must fill in the certificates – died of malnutrition – because the food must be forced to rot."

A few more facts. In 1933 alone, the federal government bought 6 million hogs and destroyed them. Vast quantities of milk were poured down the sewers. 25 million acres of crops (the area of a square with sides 200 miles long) were ploughed under. In Brazil, 69 million bags of coffee, equivalent to two years' output, were destroyed. All to keep up prices.

What about this time round?

The current depression is the deepest since that of the 1930s, and its end is not yet in sight. As real wages continue to fall and austerity measures bite harder, more and more goods will remain unsold.Falling prices and profits are already leading to scenes reminiscent of those portrayed by Steinbeck.

Leaving strawberries to rot

In March reports appeared that Florida strawberry growers, faced with a flooded market and a sharp collapse in wholesale prices, were leaving huge tracts to rot in the fields. Most of these farmers did not allow people in to pick fruit for themselves. They were afraid that cucumbers and other new crops they were planting between the rows might be harmed. Not only the strawberries went to waste but also the water used to grow them. Cultivation of the wasted strawberries drained the groundwater and caused local water shortages.

Bulldozing houses

There have been reports from around the United States of the destruction of houses, many of them newly built. Most foreclosed houses can no longer be sold at auction, even for prices as low as $500.

They end up in the hands of banks that see no medium-term prospect of reselling them and conclude that the cheapest solution is to tear them down. This happens not only to individual houses but often to whole streets. In May 2009, a bank decided to bulldoze an almost finished housing complex in California rather than spend the few hundred thousand dollars needed to complete it.

Meanwhile the ranks of the homeless continue to swell. They are in desperate need of housing but generate no "effective demand".

Slashing clothes and shoes

In early January, The New York Times ran a story about two major retail chains, H&M and Wal-Mart, throwing out unsold clothes in trash bags. First they are made unwearable: employees are told to slash garments, slice holes in shoes, cut sleeves off coats, fingers off gloves, etc..

The response to this article included internet testimony from ex-employees of other large stores, revealing how widespread these practices now are.

Cheryl: "I worked at Dillards for several years. They do the same thing. Their logic was that if they donated it [to charity] people would try to bring it back to exchange for other merchandise."

Martha: "Yeah, I used to work at a store where they would rip the bed sheets, blankets and pillow cases if they couldn't sell them, then throw them away... I thought it was dumb. I wanted to take it and donate it, but they didn't let me."

Nat: "I used to work for H&M and hated to cut the clothing [that] I knew we could have given away to those who needed it. We destroyed EVERYTHING and I found it so stupid. It was such a waste and sad!"

Maryliz: "This just makes me sick. How terrible, especially right now with people freezing to death. They could have been saved if they had sufficient warm clothing. Shame on the companies that do this."

Maggie: "I got so mad that my managers wouldn't box up [unsold food] and take it to shelters that I called corporate headquarters... They wouldn't let the food be donated! Some blather about how that would devalue the brand, because people would just go to that shelter to eat the food instead of coming and paying for it."

The vintage

Steinbeck finishes Chapter 25 with the passage that gives his book its title:
"In the eyes of the hungry there is a growing wrath. In the souls of the people the grapes of wrath are filling and growing heavy, growing heavy for the vintage."

There is ample cause for wrath. But wrath is not enough. The managers who got Maggie so angry have to act as they do.

(Otherwise they won't remain managers.) They have to pursue the commercial logic of maximising profit or minimising loss. The idea of giving people what they need, simply because they need it, is inconsistent with this logic. It expresses a different, human logic, which will come into its own once we reorganize society on a different, human basis.
